STATEMENT

If the principal causes which lost the bat. tle of Austerliez to the allies, extracted from a detailed parrative of that import. ant battle, published in one of our latest London papers :

hat the following are the principle causes which lost the battle to the allies : the inccurate notions which they held with reard to the French army; the bad plan of ttack which they pursued, supposing that rmy to be entrenched in a position which did not occupy; the movement executed n the evening before the battle, and in ight of the enemy, to advance upon the ight of the French; the great distance beween the columns when they quitted the eights of Pratzen, and their want of muial communication, these were the first isfortunes of the Austro-Russian army. lutin spite of these greatfaults there might ave been a mode of restoring the chanches favor of the allies, if the second and hird columns had been less anxious about heir own dispositions, and more about hose of the enemy, who by a bold movenent absolutely overthrew the basis on thich the plan of attack had been calculated; and if in short, the first coulmn, astead of retiring by way of Aujest, had parched to the aid of the second and third, nd with them, or least with their remains, ad advanced against the heights which the rench only occupied precariously, as long s the left of the allies was not in a state of out, and while the extremity of their ight, which only made public demonstraions, was at Posorsitz.

We do not speak here of the losses of he two armies at the battle of Austeritz. t is impossible even for persons in the ield of battle to compute exactly the num. per of killed and wounded on both sides.

The battle of the second of December was very bloody. The few Austrians who still remained, were not united in any one point, but conducted themselves on all points with well supported valor, only the 6 attalions of the regiments of Wirismburg and of Reuss Grantz were in a state of fout, when the fourth column was beaten. Theliussians at the commencement fought with intrapidity; the guards and Flalans 2-

I'm French infantry managevred with calmness and precision, fought with auda, ctiv, and executed their bota mavements with great concert. After useless efforts, vaculation was introduced into the Russian battalions; disorder and route followed the imprusance of the second and third co. lumns. The fourth column abandoned a part of their artillery; the first, second, and third columns lost all theirs, the corps of General Kiennayer excepted, which sa. ved its arrillry. The cappon stuck fast in the mire; and the Russian horses, more adapted for the chace than for draught, could not drag them from the clayer soil into which they spak-

the number of Russian prisoners may be iputed at 15,000; that of the killed and vounded must have been considerable. There must also, as in the case of similar misfortuness, have been many of the soldiers of the allies dispersed. The less of the French must likewise have been great; the fire at the commencament of the action was too severe not to have de. strayed a number of men; bat still this diminution of the French forces was not to be compared to that of the allies. The Generals killed, wounded, or taken prisoners, are known.

The 3d and 4th of December. The Austro Russian army had such dif. ficulty of subsisting upon the line of ope. ration which it had taken up since its offensive movements, that it was compelled to abandon that line in its retreat, and di. rect its march towards Hungary. The allies quitted, after midnight, the position of Hodiegitz, and marched for Cheitsch, where they arrived in the morning of the third of December. The column of Dochtorow arrived on its route to Hungary, at Niskowitz, where it found General Kien. mayer then forming the rear guard of the allies.

This Russian column continued its march to rejoin the army at Czeitsch; but during the night it was deprived of great numbers, who lost themselves in the woods and villages. The Austrian cavalry who had protected the retreat of this wreck of the left of the combined army, and who tormed part of the corps of Kienmayer, halted at Niskowitz. Prince Sagrathion was a league behind that Austrian corps, occupying the heights of Urschutz. Between Niskowitz and Urschutz, there was

When those who in the morning had entered Austerlitz marched for. IT will not have escaped military men, ward, general Kienmayer fell back upon prince Bagration, and formed in front of Samschitz the support of that corps. A detachment of light horse of Oreilly, with some Cossacks were sent to Stanitz to watch that route. The corps of M. de Meerveldt had received orders to retire from Lundenburg towards Goeding, to observe the left and chiefly the two routs of Auspitz and, Nickolsburg.

On the 3d of December, the French army advanced in the following manner : The cavalry of Prince Murat had pushed its detachments to Rausnitz and Wischau: it followed that rouse, made an immease booty, advanced beyond Prospicz, and then directed large detachments to Kremsin.

Marshal Lannes followed the same route, and then took to his right to bear upon the right of the allies by Butchowitz and Stantz. Marshals Soult and Berna. dotte, the imperial guards, and the reserve of the grenadiers, after the emperor Napoleon had been informed of the line of march of the allies, were placed on the route to Eugary, but only advanced slowly: probably to give to the extremity of the right of the army time to gain ground upon the left of the allies.

Marsha! Davoust marched upon the left flank of the Austro-Russian army, by the route of Nickolsburg, where was the division of Gudin, and by the route of Aus. pitz, where was the remaindor of that corps; the two routes united at the distauce of half a league from Goeding.

Prince Bagrathion and placed some pos s forward in the wood of Urschutz. About two in the afternoon the French reconnoitred it, made themselves masters of the wood, and established themselves as far as its limits. A skirmish then took place, which lasted for two hours, in which General Bagrathion maintained his position; but he quitted it in the evening, retired towards Czeitch, and Kienmayer placed himself in advance, upon the heights of pove all were distinguished for their coul Nasedlowitz, pushing his advanced posts to Urschu Z.

On the 4th of December, the allied army passed the March, and was at Hollitsch, where it arrived greatly diminished in strength, and with very few soldiers to place in line, particularly when compared with the opposing army. The emperor Alexander lodged at the castle of Hollitsch; the emperor of Germany remained at Czertsch, to be in readiness for the approaching interview with the emperor of the French.

There was to be an armistice from the break of day of the 4th. The prince of Lichtenstein had returned the evening before from the head quarters of the emperor Napoleon with this news; but the advanced guard, probably, not having recoived orders to that effect, made an attack, early in the morning, on the posts of Kienmayer, who remained upon the heights of Nasedlowitz. Prince Bagrathion then retired behind Czeitch. However, this misunderstanding and the fire soon ceased; a suspension of hostilities took place, and a space of about half a league was left between the advanced posts of the two armies. The French had advanced towards, and taken a position, in several lines, between Damborschutz and Samschutz, in front of Urschutz.

The two emperors Francis II and Napoleon then held, at a fittle distance from the village of Nasodlowitz, near a mill, by the side of the great road, and in the open air, the famous interview which established peace between the two empires. The conversation of these two sovereigns lasted a considerable time: the emperor of Germany afterwards returned to Czeitsch, where he arrived in the evening, and informed his ally of the result of that interview. An Austrian general was to set out immediately for that purpose to Hollitsch; and general Savary, first aid-de-camp to the emperor Napoleon, was appointed by his sovereign to follow the emperor Francis, and then to continue his course with the general who was commissioned to go to Hollitsch. General Savary was to stop the march of Davoust's division. provided the Russian emperor agreed to the conditions of the armistice; and the Austrian general was then to accompany Savary, in order to apprize the corps of Meerveldt of the armistice. General Stutterheim was chosen by his sovereign for this commission. These generals arrived at Hollitsch about midnight when they were introduced to the emperor A lexander, who received them with kindness, and did not oppose the armistice. They immediately set out for the corps of Meerveldt and to stop that of Davoust, the former of which they met, at two in the morning, in retreat to Goeding. M. de Meerveldt was to protect the left of the Russian army, but he had under his orders only about 4000 infantry and 600 horse, an extensive wood, by which the French | it was therefore impossible for him to arrest !

The two general's found Devoust at Jose advanced guard of general Gudla was at N dorf. In consequence of what had been agreupon between the emperors Francis and No poleon, all the treops remained on the st where they had received orders to cease ho lities. On the morrow the prince of Licht stein returned to Austerlitz, to settle a line demarkation during the armistice which p ceded the peace between Austria and Fran Latest Foreign Intelligence.

By the ship Richard, capinin Rogers, from Nastes, wa have completed our file of Paris papers to the 25th of September inclusive. I hey breaths throughout a spirit of bostility, being occupied principally with the " dreadful note of preparation" over the whole of the European coations for a recommencement of wer.

In the translations we have made for the Mercasille Advertiser (which, with the following brief abstract, comprise the most prominent features of the intelligence) we have given a preference to the celebrated treaty between France and Russia, which the emperor Alexander refused to ratify. Other articles, of miner consequence, are on band, and shall appear herenfter.

When the treaty of d'Oubril was received at St. Petersburgh, the emperor summoned a council of state, expressly for the perpose of submitting to their judgment this act of pacification. The treaty being compared with the instructions, it appeared to the couseil that M. d'Oubril had not only deviated from his orders, but that he acted in direct opposition to the letter & spirit of the mission with which he had been charged. The imperial council, inspired by ose common sentiment for the honor of their country, agreed with his maresty that this act ought not to obtain the supreme ratification. Notice thereof was immediately sent by the emperor to the French government, at the same time ex. pressing a disposition to renew the negocitione upon other bases.

The consequence has been that France, Holland, Russia Prussia, Sweden and the confederation of the Rhine are actively emplayed in measures for a renewal of hostilities with a vigor perhaps unprecedented even in the aunair of modern warfare.

Norie Austria on idle looker on. The force she maintains, of which the archduke Charles is generalisimo, is composed of 8 field marshale, 31 generals of cavalry, 117 lieutenant generals, 272 major generals, 64 regiments of infantry of the line, 56 other regiments of different descriptions, besides corps of bombadiers, miners, &c.

All the corps of the national army of Holland have received orders to hold them. selves in readiness to march to the camp at Zeist at a momente notice.

Rectuiting is vigorously carrying on in all the provinces of Bavaria. The camp at Mendon had not broke up on the 25th of September. Such a measure was expected to take place daily; and it is given, as a report, in one of our Paris papers, that the soldiers who compose this eamp received on the 17th leave of absence for the last time previous to their marching towards Germany. The regiments of foot composing the emperor's body guard had left Paris in light waggons for the Rhine, where an immense army was assembling, and it was expected would reach that river in a few days. This day the conservative senate has held an extraordinary sitting. It is believed that the object of his majesty's message has been to make known to the senate the marriage concluded between his imperial highness prince Jerome and a princess royal of Wittemburgh. It is added that at the end of the message two letters were read; one to the prince primate of the confederation of the Rhine, making known to him the emperor's intention to support the confedera. in with all the forces of France; the o. ther to the ! g of Bavaria, announcing that, notwithstanding many court intrigues. his majesty hopes still to preserve peace with Frussia; but that, should that power not return a prompt and categorical answer to the explanations which have been demanded, he will be ready to enter Germany Extract of a letter, dated " NEW-YORK, Nov. 13.

By the ship Richard, arrived here yesterday, 42 days from Nantz, I have received letters from my partners there [Delaroche and Co.] to the 1st Oct. which mentions that all hopes of peace were at an end, and that the French armies were marching towards Prussia. Lord Lauderdale, on the 35th September, was still in Paris, detained by sickness. The consequence of all this has been a rise in the prices of colonial produce, which were getting scarce and in demand.
